East Terrace: An Historic Waco Foundation Home

East Terrace is a treasured 1870s Italianate home built by J. W. Mann on the East bank of the Brazos River. The grounds were terraced down to the river with brick walls and walks, hence the name "East Terrace." There were resplendent rose gardens, strutting peacocks, and a sunken garden with a goldfish pond.

The first owner of East Terrace, J. W. Mann, was born November 9, 1838, in Lebanon, Tennessee, where he, his father, J. C. Mann and brother, Thomas, raised horses. Mr. Mann bought land and horses in the Waco area as early as 1858 and was living here in 1861 when he enlisted in the Confederate Army as a private in Company C, Sixth Regiment, Texas Cavalry. It is estimated that Mr. Mann bought the property around 1872 and the family moved in early 1874.
