Background Information:

In 1823, Stephen F. Austin wrote a letter to Mexico City asking for permission to create the first Texas Rangers to provide defense for Austin's new Texas colony. The first Texas Rangers consisted of just ten volunteers and served under Lieutenant Moses Morrison. The Rangers would ride horses along the frontier of Texas and protect the colonists from Native American raids and other banditry as necessary. Early Texas Rangers were responsible for bringing all of their own supplies: including a horse, single shot guns, and a knife. Texas Rangers in the 1820s often did not have clear leadership, were rarely paid, and typically were mustered and disbanded as needed.
