The Lacy Bowie Knife - A Mystery

Over the holidays, Mr. Rudolph Gleichman of Pennsylvania donated a fascinating item from his collections, a 17" long 1830s-40s style Bowie knife. Its scabbard bears an intriguing inscription "R.P. Bowie to Capt. Wm Y. Lacey." The blade was likely made in England for the American trade, and the handle is horn, possibly buffalo. It has been examined by numerous Bowie knife authorities over the decades who have attested to its age.

James "Jim" Bowie (1796-1836) who died at the Alamo made the "Bowie knife" famous in the "Sandbar Fight" duel he fought in 1827. Bowie knives became a fad so popular that factories in England and Germany turned out thousands for export to Texas and the West. There even existed schools to teach greenhorns knife fighting. Urban legend, now largely discredited, has it that Bowie's brother, Rezin Pleasant Bowie (1793-1841), a Louisiana planter, land speculator and slave smuggler "invented" the Bowie knife. He may have influenced the addition of the iconic cross-guards and Texas-clipped point to what was otherwise a butcher or dressing knife.

After Jim Bowie's heroic death, Rezin presented Bowie knives of different designs to a number of acquaintances including the Governor of Louisiana, an army officer (the Fowler Bowie displayed at the Alamo), and actor Edwin Forrest. The inscription on the Forrest Bowie matches this knife.

Rezin Bowie would have presented this knife to William Young Lacy/also Lacey (1814-1892). Lacy came to Texas in 1830, rode with Jim Bowie for eight months in 1834, and was commissioned into the Corps of Rangers from May of 1836 to December of 1837 serving as acting captain on the death of his commander. Sam Houston later sent him to Nacogdoches and Houston Counties to form militia (Ranger) companies. It is unclear if Rezin Bowie knew Capt. Lacy. If he did they would have met between 1830 and 1832 when Lacy and Rezin Bowie were both in Texas. The knife would have been presented before Rezin's death in 1841.

Is the inscription genuine? Old artifacts have sometimes been 'enhanced' with tantalizing inscriptions. However, most counterfeit inscriptions refer to well-known individuals. When Mr. Gleichman purchased the knife 36 years ago, Capt. Lacy was barely known to a few historians and is little-known today.

Although the attribution looks promising there is more research to be done. We thank Mr. Gleichman for the generous gift to the people of Texas of a rare Bowie knife, one of perhaps great historical value.

NEW ADMISSION DESK

When the museum opened in 1968, the admission desk was just the stone section seen below. In response to a growing need for a freshened up space with more storage and workspace, the museum and City of Waco hired Koerhy Cabinets of Waco to create a wood desk that would wrap around and incorporate the original stone desk. Workers installed it on December 6th, just in time for the holiday rush. The fourth picture shows the first museum guest utilizing the new desk.
SPRING BREAK ROUND UP 2018
